Virginia Recognizes 15 Mines, Over 70 Individuals for Excellence in Worker Safety

DMME Receives National Awards for Safety Training Programs

Big Stone Gap, VA – The Virginia Department of Mines, Minerals and Energy (DMME) awarded 15 coal mines in the Commonwealth that worked nearly two million hours combined without a lost time injury on their sites in 2019. Over 70 coal miners were also recognized with individual awards for working decades without an injury.

“Our operators and coal miners continue to promote and execute exceptional safety in the workplace,” said Virginia Mine Chief Randy Moore. “Our coal miners are the most valuable asset to the industry and it is an honor for our coal mine safety team to work alongside them to ensure they all return to their families at the end of their shift.”

Even more admirable is the fact there were no fatalities in Virginia’s coal industry in 2019. The Commonwealth’s last coal mining fatality was in 2015. In addition, DMME won more awards than any other state for safety training programs. The Mine Safety and Health Administration presented the awards during their national conference held virtually in October. DMME’s new Electrical Motor Guidebook and Surface Mine Foreman and Underground Mine Foreman continuing education training programs received top honors.

The mines and miners will be recognized for their extraordinary safety achievements with awards presented by DMME on behalf of the Virginia Mine Safety Board. Photos of the presentations will be posted on DMME’s website, Facebook, Twitter and LinkedIn accounts.
